Brent Hagenbuch Is Old-Fashioned

Brent Hagenbuch was raised in a small rural town, where he learned the value of hard work from his father - who was a firefighter - and his grandfather - who was a state trooper.

Brent was the first student from his school to attend a service academy, and it was at the Naval Academy, where he became involved in the Officers' Christian Fellowship and accepted Christ as his Lord.

After graduating from the Naval Academy, Hagenbuch served as an officer in the U.S. Navy Civil Engineer Corps during the first Gulf War era - a decorated military veteran serving overseas.

Looking for the next challenge, Brent eventually started his own trucking company - Titus Transport, a $170 million a year leader in transportation services with 750 drivers delivering to 1,500 grocery stores across the country for large retail food chains.

In 2010, Brent became involved in the TEA Party, because he was fed up with the Obama administration and its policies, because they did not share his Christian worldview and were trying to tear down the values America was built on.

He was motivated by Donald Trump's 2016 Presidential campaign to become more involved in the Republican Party - serving as a precinct chair, then as vice-chairman, and the party chairman. Brent focused his efforts on keeping Denton County RED by increasing the Republican vote, engaging candidates, and empowering the grassroots.

Ronald Reagan was the first President Brent voted for, because he saw what Reagan did for the country and has been a Reagan Republican ever since.

Brent Hagenbuch believes the example set by Donald Trump of bringing a true business approach to government should be followed in Texas.

- He supports an aggressive and comprehensive approach to securing our border including a border wall, more law enforcement, and better technology to protect Texas
- Brent Hagenbuch knows that Texas remains the place that all America used to be, and he will fight the woke cultural decline infecting corporate and government institutions
- Brent Hagenbuch supports law enforcement officers with the equipment and training they need to stop human trafficking
- Brent Hagenbuch supports adequate funding for our public schools but he also believes parents should have a choice as to which school they send their child to
